

Carolyn Keck (born Carolyn Bond) grew up in Hanover, NH. She attended Bennington College and the Royal College of music as a performance major on violin and did her Masters work at Claremont Graduate School in Music Composition. She played with the Mexico City Philharmonic as a violinist for several years and has taught music programs from Massachusetts to California in the public school system.

Recently Carolyn retired from the Marion Cross School in Norwich, Vt., after 13 years there, where she had a band, an orchestra, two choruses and many general music classes. One of her greatest pleasures has been working with musicians to create beautiful music for themselves and their community. Now, to have the opportunity to conduct the South Royalton Band, is exciting and she is looking forward to getting starting.

Carolyn lives in West Newbury, Vermont with her husband and two large dogs.
